❖ Portfolio Manager’s Perspective

The Federal Reserve maintained the 3.50%–3.75% target range in August, with Warsh emphasizing the 2% PCE target remains unshakeable; rate hikes stay an option if underlying inflation does not clearly and rapidly decline. August non-farm payrolls beat expectations, and labor resilience has reduced the scope for rate cuts. We expect inflation to remain the key driver of US Treasury yields, while Middle East geopolitics and long-term bond supply continue to disrupt capital markets; consequently, long-term yields are expected to fluctuate at elevated levels over 3–6 months, with limited room for decline.
